MIDLAND – Alden B. Dow Museum of Science and Arts is offering DESTINATION: ArtPrize, charter bus service to view the ArtPrize competition in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Departure is from the Midland Center for the Arts parking lot on Monday, September 27, at 8 am. Cost for the day-long trip is $45; $35 for Museum members. Participants are responsible for providing or purchasing their own meals. Comfortable walking shoes are a must as is an umbrella in case of rain. Estimated arrival time for return to MCFTA is 10 pm. Suitable for adults. Seating is limited. Registration deadline is September 17.

Gallery viewing in Grand Rapids is on your own or in small groups. Groups will have the opportunity to meet periodically throughout the day for a midday meal, special viewings and transport to other locations (itinerary to be determined). Art is exhibited in an assortment of venues: large to small, indoor and outdoor. All venues are located within a 3-square-mile area.

Grand Rapids' ArtPrize is an open competition featuring the world's largest cash prize for art: $449,000 total, with $250,000 going to the first-place winner. Winners are determined by a vote from visitors. This year's competition runs from September 22 through October 10 and features 1,713 artists from 44 states and 21 countries. Local artists associated with Midland Center for the Arts are:

- Valerie Allen (displaying at Cathedral Square)
- Michelle Courier (displaying at Tanaz Hair Boutique)
- Emmy Heger (displaying at Art Addiction and Oddities)
- Ruth Howell (displaying at Ottawa Tavern)
- Armin Mersmann (displaying at Grand Rapids Public Museum)
